15th Sunday in Ordinary Time

Year B:

July 15, 2018

The Year of
Fr Francis Jordan
Sept 8,
2017-2018

After his apparent lack of success in Nazareth, Jesus embarks on the next stage of the work of spreading the kingdom. He challenges his apostles to share in his radical trust in the Father as they go forward, believing that the power they have is from God and knowing that the message is one of repentance — that is, true conversion of heart. Their task is an urgent one and they are not to delay. It is worth recalling that when they were first called by Jesus it was 'to be with him'. Now, having been with him and coming to know him, they are empowered to do as he has done. A genuine faith involves both a grateful recognition of what is given and also a desire to be changed from within and to live accordingly.

PARISH OFFICE THIS WEEK

We advise that the office will be closed this Wednesday, July 18, as Colleen will be on leave, and we thank Edyta Gandra for taking on the office duties on the Thursday.

By Monday July 23, all will return to 'business as usual' in the parish as Fr Sebastian returns this coming weekend!

MOVIES WITH MEANING

'I Am Potential' — Sat July 28 at the Jordan Room after the Vigil.

Based on the true story of Patrick Henry Hughes, 'I Am Potential' is a truly heart warming story of how life can sometimes turn out differently than expected but not necessarily worse. It is the inspiring true story of sacrifice, perseverance and realising one's God given potential. What would you give up so your child could fulfil their dream? Please come along, and bring a plate to share for dinner.

POPE FRANCIS SPEAKS TO THE PONTIFICAL ACADEMY FOR LIFE ... AND TO US

Vatican City — Behind the indifference toward human life lies a contagious illness that blinds people to the lives, challenges and struggles of others, Pope Francis said. Like the mythical figure Narcissus, people risk becoming infected by a "contagious spiritual virus" that turns them into "mirrored men and women who only see themselves and nothing else," the pope said June 25 to members of the Pontifical Academy for Life. "Evil looks to persuade us that death is the end of all things, that we have come to the world by chance and that we are destined to end in nothingness. By excluding the other from our horizon, life withdraws in itself and becomes just a good to be consumed," he said. The Pontifical Academy for Life began its June 25-27 general assembly, reflecting on the theme "Equal beginnings, but then? A global responsibility." The pope told members that the "ethical and spiritual quality of life in all its phases" must inspire the church's "behaviour toward human ecology." He also said that life from conception, childhood, adolescence, adulthood, old age, as well in those moments when it is "fragile and sick, wounded, offended, demoralised, marginalised and those cast aside" is "always human life." "When we surrender children to deprivation, the poor to hunger, the persecuted to war, the elderly to abandonment, we are not doing our own work but rather the dirty work of death. And where does the 'dirty work' of death come from? It comes from sin," he said. Speaking to journalists after the pope's speech, Archbishop Vincenzo Paglia, president of the Pontifical Academy for Life, said it was the first time the pope used the phrase "dirty work of death" to describe issues that threaten the sanctity and dignity of human life. "The dirty work of death means all areas -- even legislative decisions -- in which life isn't helped but rather weakened, hindered, not helped and not supported in all its forms," Paglia said. "In this sense, the pope exhorts us to do, in every way possible, the beautiful work of life and not be like Pontius Pilate, who washes his hands and allow the dirty of work of death to cast innocents aside," he added. Francis also highlighted the need for "a global vision of bioethics" inspired by Christian thought, in which the value of one's life is not determined by sickness and death but by the "profound conviction of the irrevocable dignity of the human person." Citing his 2015 encyclical, "Laudato Si", on Care for Our Common Home, the pope called for a "holistic vision of the person" and the importance of articulating clearly the universal human condition "beginning from our body." "Our body itself establishes us in a direct relationship with the environment and with other living beings. The acceptance of our bodies as God's gift is vital for welcoming and accepting the entire world as a gift from the Father and our common home, whereas thinking that we enjoy absolute power over our own bodies turns, often subtly, into thinking that we enjoy absolute power over creation," the pope said. Encouraging the Pontifical Academy for Life's work in promoting a culture of life in the field of bioethics, Francis said that this culture must always look toward "the final destination" where every person is called to be in communion with God. "To recognise and appreciate this faithfulness and dedication to life raises gratitude and responsibility in us and encourages us to generously offer our knowledge and experience to the whole human community," the pope said.
